Capucci Found Guilty, Is Given A 12-Year Term

By James E. Clarity

JERUSALEM, Dec. 9 (NYT).—The Most Rev. Hilarion Capucci. Greek Catholic architektop of Jerusalem, was sentenced to 12 ars in prison today, a few hours after being convicted of smuggling us into the Israeli-occupied West Bank for Palestinian guerrillas.

The archbishop, who could have received a maximum sentence 35 years, had contended that he was the victim of a "frame-up." it the three-judge civilian court rejected the claim as a "daring and ifounded argument." Archhishop Capucci, 52, who has spiritual jurisdiction over 4,500 Greek Catholics, most of them Arabs living in Jerusalem, the West Bank and central Israel, is the highest-ranking Christian clergy-man ever accused here of anti-Israeli sabotage. He was convicted on three counts involving arms smuggling and making contact with foreign agents.

The court rejected a plea that the archbishop be given a sus-pended sentence. He has 45 days which to appeal the verdict and sentence. He also faces the possibility of deportation by the Palestinian sources said that securing the release of the archbishop would be part of the "intensification of the struggle against the Israeli occupation authorities.

Since the archbishop's arrest last summer, Palestinian guerrillas have launched several operations inside Israel aimed at forcing the Israelis to free him and other Arab prisoners.

Lebanon's Premier Rashid Solh said in Beirut that the "unfair verdict passed on Capucci proved that Israel uses its so-called judiciary for political purposes."

Miki Favors Expertise in Cabinet Jobs

By Fox Butterfield

TOKYO, Dec. 9 (NYT).—Ta-keo Miki, Japan's new Premier, selected a cabinet today that appears to be a mixture of old-time factional balancing with an attempt to bring in some new talent to meet Japan's pressing economic and political problems. Mr. Miki, who had been picked by the ruling Liberal Democratic party last week, was formally elected Premier by the Japanese place Kakuel Tanaka, Mr. Tanaka and his cabinet resigned earlier in the day,

In choosing his cabinet, Mr. Miki seemed to place emphasis on assembling a strong economic team. It will include Takeo Fukuda, a former finance minister and financial expert who will become deputy premier and head of the Economic Planning Agency, and Klichi Miyazawa, who will be the new foreign minister.

The appointment of Mr. Miyazawa was seen as particularly significant because he is one of the party's foremost intellectuals and is widely respected for his economic knowledge.

Masayoshi Ohira, who served as finance minister under Mr. Tanaka, will continue in his post, one of only two holdovers. Mr. Ohira was one of Mr. Miki's chief rivals in the struggle for the

Mr. Miki's cabinet choices suggest that he is likely to follow the basic policies of his predecessor: tight money ', fight Japan's high inflation, reliance on close relations with the United States and a low diplomatic posture to avoid international entanglements. Mr. Miki, 67, a veteran parliamentary leader, was a surprise choice to succeed Mr. Tanaka after the former premier quit under allegations of financial irregularities. A man of somewhat independent views, Mr. Miki promised to reform the party's much criticized factions and fundraising activities.

Progress Is Seen At EEC Summit On Basic Issues

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, Dec. 9 (IHT).-Leaders of the European Economic Com munity met here today to try to solve the practical problems that have seriously undermined the cohesion of the community.

10-nation Eurogroup began a week of intensive activity at NATO headquarters here in which U.S. Defense Secretary James Schlesinger and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will take part.

Mr. Schlesinger arrived early today voicing hopes that the Vladivostok nuclear arms agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union foreshadows a limit also on the size of the armies based in Eastern and Western Europe. Mr. Kissinger is due tomorrow.

Ministers who took part in the Eurogroup meeting appeared satisfled at the emphasis they had placed on trying to standardize weaponry. The grouping includes

British Defense Minister Roy Mason said all Eurogroup countries should consider purchasing new weapons now in an advanced stage of development such as the British-French Lynx helicopter Milan anti-tank guided missile.
The ministers said also the European countries now should be-

Mr. Schlesinger, who spent the day resting and conferring with American officials in preparation for the discussions later in the week, told newsmen when he arrived that it was "a cause for rejoicing" that the Russians have now dropped their insistence on

Rhodesia Blacks Said to Plan Military, Political Cohesion

LUSAKA, Zambia, Dec. 9 (Reuters).—Rhodesia's black nationalist leaders and aides living in exile in this country were believed to be meeting privately today to discuss details of the unity pact they signed here yesterday.

The whereabouts of the leaders,

Joshua Nkomo and the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, were not known. Zambian officials said that the two were no longer at State House, their base for nearly a week since they were tem-porarily released from jail by Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith last Tuesday.

The two men's Rhodesian prison sentences were to have been renceled today if last week's negotiations had been successful. Sources close to their outlawed movements, the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) and the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU), said the two leaders were expected to continue their discussions today on a com-mon military and political strategy for winning majority black rule in Rhodesia. It is still not known whether they will return to their cells in Rhodesia or remain in Zambia to prepare for a special congress of African National Council (ANC), Rhodesia's only legal African grouping and now an umbrells for the new union of the breaksway British colony's rival

OAS Panel Cites Chilean Rights Violations

By Lewis H. Diuguid

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (WP), -The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights has compiled the most detailed and documented denunciation yet to appear of human-rights violations in Chile since the military coup of September, 1973,

In a report to the parent Organization of American States, the commission finds "extremely serious violations" of 10 fundamental human rights established by hemispheric agreements to which Chile is committed

It cites physical and mental torture, retroactive imposition of unconstitutional punishments and total deprivation of political rights.

In accord with the commission's mandate, the 175-page report was submitted first to the Chilean government before presentation to the OAS Council last week

They are the right to life, personal safety, liberty, habeas corpus, due process, expression and information, assembly, association, opinion and equality before law and political participation.

The commission acknowledges general cooperation of the Chilean authorities, with one exception that is the key to the question of torture. The visitors were permitted free access to prisoners. Indeed, the report offers transcribed tape recordings of prison interviews accusing the junta of criminal acts beyond the scope of the commission's own denum-

But the commission charges that its freedom of movement in Chile was restricted when it came to five "torture centers."

It notes that "during the in-

Consistently, the commission found in its widely scattered visits to prison camps that the torture was alleged to have taken place in five specific military or police installations. The commission requested permission to visit each and was allowed to visit

The report notes the interest expressed at the outset of its visit by the Chilean minister of the interior in any findings that would document use of the supposedly prohibited torture.

"The commission is absolutely certain that a high-level and completely independent investigating commission designated by the government of Chile would not have the slightest difficulty in making the checks that the commission members were prevented from carrying out," the report says.

In rebuttal, Chile points out that all governments are permitted "to guard the security of certain places intimately related to national defense." It then emphasizes that one of the five "torture centers," the navy ship Esmeralda, was on a Pacific cruise during the commission's visit.

A member of the commission's staff said that when members asked to visit the ship they were refused information even as to

Kuwaitis Buying U.S. Arms, Seek Soviet Weapons

KUWAIT, Dec. 9 (UPI) .- The Kuwaiti government said today that it has signed an agreement with the United States for the purchase of modern weapons and is awaiting a reply from the Soviet Union on a request for military supplies. No financial details were given.

The Minister of Defense, Sheikh Saad al-Abdulla, made the an-nouncement at a news conference after celebrations marking the return of a Kuwaiti Army con-tingent from the Suez front. The unit had served alongside Egyptian forces since the 1973 war.

The package of measures was announced today in the House of Commons by Eric Varley, the energy minister. The moves were generally applanded, but MPs from all parties complained that they were not nearly severe enough. One member described them as small squeak indeed.".

An abashed Mr. Varley replied, "We are not too proud to turn down any practical suggestion that is made."

The new program fixes a limit of 68 degrees Fahrenheit (20 centigrade) for temperatures in offices, factories and other non-residential buildings.

Motorists will not be allowed to go faster than 60 miles an bour except on expressways. There, the limit will stay at 70 miles an hour, largely because a lower rate is unenforceable, as government acknowledged. The 60-mph will be set for fourlane highways, while a 50-mph maximum will be permitted on two-lane roads.

It is almost impossible to drive faster than 50 for very long on Britsin's winding two-lane roads, so drivers will not have to give up much. However, the Transportation Ministry hopes that the new limits will cut average driving speeds by about five miles

In addition, car drivers can look forward to bigger gasoline hills. The oil companies have asked permission to increase their prices. Mr. Varley said that most of the forthcoming rise will af-fect gasoline. Britons now pay $1.45 a gallon for the second-highest grade, a price fixed last month after the sales tax was raised to 25 per cent from 8 per

It was cut 1 per cent last month to curb pollution. This step will not be repealed, but further reductions, which make gasoline less efficient as a fuel, are not likely to be allowed. After New Year, Britain's shopping streets will be less garish, Mr. Varley will curb the use of electricity during day-light hours for window displays and outdoor advertising. These and other oil-conserving steps are dictated by Britain's economic squeeze. The nation will import $7 billion in oil this Presidential politicking played a relatively small part in this first nonpresidential party con-vention. Nixon Tape Allusions to Fund Spur Investigation of Rebozo

By John M. Crewdson

It has been known that, for the last year, the special Watergite prosecutor has been looking casely at Mr. Rebozo's handling of cash "contributions" to Mr. Nition's 1972 re-election campaign, irrluding a gift of $100,000 from E ward Hughes, the billionaire, the Mr. Rebozo says he later

Senate Panel's Report

The possibility of an illicit fund, made up of cash from wealthy contributors such as Mr. Hughes, was raised by the Senate Watergate committee in its report last summer.

Committee investigators produced evidence that Mr. Rebozo had received "at least" $190,000, mostly in cash, on Mr. Nixon's behalf; had disbursed $45,977 for improvements to the President's Florida homes and had diverted about $4,500 in leftover 1968 contributions to buy diamonds that Mr. Nixon gave to his wife.

Highways Built

The growth began when highways built during the last 15 years replaced the old mule trails that had left Santa Cruz all but isolated from the rest of the country, although it was founded four centuries ago. Railroads now connect the city to ample markets in neighboring Argentina and Brazil And the rivalry between those two nations has assured Santa Cruz a steady flow of capital and easy credits,

Unlike any other Bolivian city, Santa Cruz has a large and growing middle class, thanks largely to cooperative savings and loan

Rescue workers search for two teen-age boys after avalanche

A Practice Alpine Rescue Becomes Real

MITTENWALD, West Gernany, Dec. 9 (AP).—Hours after Alnine searchers rescued a teenage mountain guard who survived being buried under an avalanche for nearly a day, they discovered another victim who had frozen to death.

The biggest rescue operation mounted in the Bavarian Alps since the start of the winter found the corpse of 17-year-old mountain guard Georg Batista 28 hours after he was buried under tons of snow and rubble. Eight hours earlier, the rescuers took 16-year-old Johannes Struss to a hospital in the nearby ski resort of Garmisch - Partenkirchen, badly frostbitten and suffering from shock after being buried alive

Already Talking

Bayarian border guards said doctors expect Mr. Struss to survive. He was already talking, they added.

About 300 border guards, Alpine troops and mountain rescue using tracker dogs and sounding gear combed the snowy avalanche that engulied the young men The two guards had allowed themselves to be buried in the snow by four companions in order to train rescue dogs in sniffing out avalanche victims. Immediately afterward, the avalanche came hurtling down from the Arnspitze Peak, obliterating marker flags where the two men were buried.

Their four companions man-aged to escape. The search operation lasted through the night.

Political, Charitable Faction Split Over U.S. Food Aid Plan

By Dan Morgan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (NYT).

A confidential State Department proposal to spend the major share of American food aid money in countries where Washington has a vital political or security interest is being quesioned by advocates of aid for comtries threatened by starvation.

Ford to Make Final Decision

Policy-makers who have conferred several times in recent days have been unable to resolve the split between the "political" and "humanitarian" factions. As a result. President Ford will be asked to make the final decision probably tomorrow, on which countries receive the aid for the next six months. This decision he been put off for months while authorities awaited more definitive data on American crops and the state of the economy.

Officials say it is now certain that the overall value of the program will be increased above the $891 million proposed by former President Richard Nixon in April because Mr. Ford himself pledged this increase at the UN in October. However, agencies are still far apart on whether the increase should be token or substantial. As many as four choices may be presented to the Presi-

Final Effort

Various documents—including a confidential State Department paper—were made available to The Washington Post during the weekend by officials who said they were making them public in a last effort to shift the fiscal 1975 Food for Peace program's emphasis to humanitarian needs.

At a meeting in the Agriculture Department Thursday attended by about 40 officials of eight agencies, representatives of the Office of Management and Budget argued for a program of slightly more than $1.2 billion, emphasizing countries where an emergency exists, sources re-

OMB director Roy Ash said in a telephone interview yesterday that suggestions put forth by OMB did differ from ones advanced by the State Department. Ee said that, in this case, the OMB was playing its "classical role" in seeing to it that "all options and arguments pro and con are put before the Presi-

Representatives of the State Department and the National Security Council—both of which are headed by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger-were reported to have argued for a sizable food aid program for such countries as Chile and South Kores and in the Middle East and Indo-

While some of his associates describe him as a "closet humaniterian" who would lean tow-d greater priority to aiding poor countries, others say his political position is weak and that he can-

A source quoted Denny Eller-man, the NSC representative, as saying: "To give food aid to countries just because people are starving is a pretty weak reason." Mr. Ellerman, reached by telephone, said yesterday that he had made a remark of that nature. But he said he was expressing only a personal opinion. He said it was clear that the United States had an obligation to help reduce hunger because of "fundamental charity." But he said the point he was trying to make was that food aid can only be a stopgap measure and is not a fundamental solution to the world food problem.

An official said that, while a decision to ship vastly increased quantities overseas to hungry nations would avoid criticism, can be accused of cowardice" by taking the easy way out. The oficial said it was uncertain whether the food would ever reach hungry people."

The original State Department memorandum, which may have been revised somewhat during the weekend, listed three poss positions—low, medium and high. Total Tonnage

The alternatives had a value of $764 million, $1.1 billion, and $1.3 billion. The total tonings of wheat and rice allocated under those proposals was $2.7 million, $4 million and $4.8 million respectively. Only the latter high-option proposal exceeded the 44 million tons of foed in the proposal which Mr. Nixon sent to Congress in All three alternatives assigned a substantial amount to countries

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (WP). the arms limits negotiated by Mr. Kissinger and President Ford were "wantonly high" and suggested that the talks be reopened to push the limits even lower.

Mr. Kissinger, at a news conference Saturday, said those who want to try that course must be prepared to raise the U.S. arms budget $5 billion to $10 billion. That would be the only incentive, he said, to induce the Russians to consider lower limits. He also warned that a new, divisive debate in the United States, following the controversy over trade concessions for the Soviet Union, might force the Russians to conclude that détente faces "domestic difficulties of an insuperable nature in the United States."

Sen, Jackson dismissed that objection and raised a new one that Mr. Kissinger has not produced a written agreement on

Fulbright Tackles Chemical War

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (NYT). —As one of his final acts as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark, is seeking to obtain Senate approval for the 1925 Geneva protocol banning chemical and bacteriological Whether Sen. Fulbright can

Among the major powers, only the United States has not ratified the 50-year-old treaty. Former President Richard Nixon resubmitted the treaty to the Senate in 1970, but consideration became bogged down on the issue of whether the treaty covered tear gas and herbicides.

Largely to meet Pentagon de-mends, the administration insisted on an informal interpreta-tion that the protocol did not cover the use of tear gas and berbicides, both of which were used during the Vietnam war. A committee majority objected that such a reservation would erode the effectiveness of the me and the committee in 1971 laid aside the treaty.

There are indications that the two sides are narrowing if not resolving their differences. When the committee resumes its hear-ings tomorrow the administration will present what Fred Ikle, the director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, describes as a new position. Basically, the administration will affirm its interpretation that the treaty does not cover tear gas and herbicides, an interpretation that runs counter to a resolu-tion approved by the United Nations General Assembly in 1969 by an 80-3 vote.

At the same time, however, the administration will make a com-mitment that these materials would be used by the United British Bakers End

The military use of herbicides. for example, would be banned except for clearing foliage around a base or outpost to provide a clear field of fire. In Vietnam, herbicides were used to defoliate trees along Communist supply lines and, to a lesser extent, for destruction of food crops.

Use of tear gas, under the administration proposal, would be limited to such situations as riot control over prisoners of war, rescue of downed pilots and in combat when enemy forces are using "human shields" for protec tion. One of the principal uses of tear gas in Vietnam, now to be banned, was to flush enemy troops out of bunkers.

As described by officials, the compromise is about as far as the administration can go. One of the privately expressed concerns of the military is that if the treaty is now interpreted to include tear gas and herbicides, it could expose the United States to charges of war crimes in Viet-

The End of Balkan Monarchy

Whelmingly for a republic seems to have put an end not only to monarchy in Greece, but in all the Balkans. To be sure, Greece had a republican form of government in its modern history - from 1924 to 1935 - and King George II came back from across the seas to mount the throng again. But the sweep of the Greek election, and the trend of the times seem to work against King Constantine repeating that feat. What is interesting is not that the Greeks have renounced the monarchy but that they were so late in doing so. For Greece was the first of the Balkan states to have a king after winning freedom from the Turks-and it held its allegiance to royalty the longest.

Balkan monarchy was a curious institution. The Greek kings were not sons of Atreus; their first ruler, after independence, came from Bavaria; the second house, the one now formally deposed, was that of Denmark, with the impressive and unhellenic name of Schleswig - Holstein - Glucksburg, Similarly, Romania's royal house was that of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, the branch of the family that ruled Prussia and the German Empire. while Bulgaria had Battenbergs from Hesse, whose British cousins have been Anglicized into Mountbattens. Only Serbia and little Montenegro, both now portions of Tito's Yugoslavia, crowned indigenous notables as

The Greek referendum which declared over- . The reason, of course, was that the emergence of the Balkans from under the Ottoman shadow was not only aided, but largely controlled by the Furopean powers. Greece was at least nominally under the protection of Great Britain, France and Russia until 1919, and in the early days of the 19th century that protectorate was vigorous and intrusive. And, while the Balkan kings eventually became much more closely associated with their kingdoms than with the dynasties from which they had descended, the taint of foreign extraction haunted all their

The victories of the Soviet Union and of Communism that followed its banners into the Balkans eliminated all of the monarchies except that of Greece. Now that country is making its second experiment with a democratic republic, with Constantine Caramanlis attempting the role that Eleutherios Venizelos had tried in the 1920s. His success is important. Greece now lacks a king as the symbol of its nationality-a symbol, it must be added, that falled to keep Greece out of the hands of an authoritarian Metaxas in the years before World War II, or to prevent the recent military dictatorship. Greece must base its government and its nationhood on the realities of popular will, rather than on imported symbols, and to shape that reality into prosperous stability will be a test of the leadership of Caramanlis and of the Greek people.

Vital Trade Reform

tion policies of, the Soviet Union has distracted attention from the chief purpose of the long-pending trade reform bill: To open the way for the free world's next round of GATT negotiations to reduce trade barriers. If the bill is not approved by the time Congress adjourns, the next legislature will have to start from the beginning and action may well be delayed until after the 1976 election.

The congressional delay already has kept the world back from this vital next step in trade liberalization for more than two years. At a time when huge oil payments deficits could trigger a chain reaction in protectionism, further delay could produce "a blow to international stability of potentially historic proportions," as Secretary of State Kissinger has rightly warned the Senate Finance Committee

Without American participation under the broad grant of authority the trade bill would give the President, the 40-year effort to dismantle the tariff walls raised during the Great Depression could go no further. The first major attack on nontariff barriers would be stillborn. Equally important, there would be a further delay in negotiating the. fundamental changes now needed in the world trading system that has grown up since World War II under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The GATT was designed to promote free tions. The trade bill would authorize the adjourns. President to seek new commitments provid-

The debate over trade with, and emigra- ing for free access to raw materials supplies as well. A whole arsenal of weapons would be provided to the President to deal with such restriction of supplies as last year's Arab oil embargo and other unfair trade practices impinging on American interests.

Included are strengthened powers to raise tariffs as well as to lower them, to retaliate against such practices as export subsidies, to grant "escape clause" relief to companies injured by an overly-rapid rise in imports and to counter foreign dumping in the American market. There are also provisions, long needed, to improve "adjustments assistance" to workers who lose their jobs because

Some of the powers requested by the administration and granted to the President by the House bill, which was passed last year, could be used by a protectionist administration to defeat the trade liberalization the country has sought for two generations. But with recession strengthening protectionist sentiment in Congress, it is too late now to try to improve the bill very much in this regard. A major battle may have to be waged on the Senate floor merely to avoid restrictive amendments in large number.

Sen, Jackson of Washington, who held up the bill to obtain Soviet emigration concessions, reportedly will try to take the lead now to get the bill through. It is late, but it still can be done. The country's vital interests are at stake and no effort should be access to markets for all participating na- spared to complete action before Congress

Far, far below on a California mountaintop, scientists pondered the next moves by Pioneer-11 as it speeds on to Saturn. Fly outside the outermost of Saturn's three rings? Fly on a cosmic "suicide mission" through the rings? Fly inside the innermost ring as close to the planet as possible?

The EEC Summit

Chancellor Schmidt said in September that he wished the EEC heads of government could think of a word other than "summit" to describe their meetings. The top of Mont Blanc was a highly inconvenient place to meet, allegorically or otherwise, and he was not sure that he had a head for heights. If all nine heads of government are in this frame of mind when they start work in Paris, they ought to be able to get something useful done. Their predecessors learned the hard way in The Hague, Paris, and Copenhagen that there are limits to the work that can be done in two days and, above all, that the fixing of target dates for increasingly difficult achievements like economic, monetary, and political union amounts to nothing more profound than the statement of an aspiration which ought to have been left unstated. Nobody knew then, and nobody knows now, how long it will be before the nine are ready to form a union.

Assessing Kissinger: Triumph and Skepticism

The boy who cried "wolf" was surprised when in the end nobody believed him. A boy who keeps crying "eureka" is eventually going to find the listeners unconvinced, too. Those who exaggerate triumphs, like those who invent danger, are bound to arouse skepticism

The man who pronounced the Vladivostok agreement a great "breakthrough" is the same man who told us just before the 1972 election that peace was "at hand" in Vietnam. After the election, he backed away from the terms he had worked out, agreeing to them only after a final spasm of violence against Hanoi, Two years later there is no peace, and he insists that the United States con-tinue to support the war in Vietnam and Cambodia

Surprise?

Is it really surprising that some people are skeptical when Henry Kissinger claims a breakthrough? The man who produced the Vladivostok deal is the same one who ditched his professional arms control advisers in 1972 in order to arrange an offensive weapons agreement for Mr. Nixon to sign in Moscow-an agreement that led to more spending on strategic arms, not less. He is the same man who paraded Nixon to Cairo and Moscow last summer in the iast desperate effort to make Americans forget Watergate. Is it surprising that some Democrats are suspicious when Henry Kissinger produces a breakthrough for Gerald Ford in Vladivostok? For two years he told Congress that it must approve trade con-cessions to the Soviet Union without attaching conditions. He said the attempt to make the Russians behave with minimum decency toward Jews who wished to emigrate was an improper intervention and would not work, But Congress insisted and the Russians did make concessions,

Role of Congress

Will it be surprising if Congress refuses to roll on its back at Henry Kissinger's warning that failure to approve a new arms agreement would have "extremely serious' conseniences?

He has furiously resisted amendments to foreign aid legislation that would limit the way he dispenses American resources abroad He wants to be free, for example, to concentrate food aid on his client states instead of the needy. Independently and intensely, they all feel that their future view mine the same way-will be and uncertainty. Even if there is reverse discrimination, and it is not ruled unconstitutional, it will never compensate for the past and future effects of our blackness on our lives as we pursue professional success and personal happiness.

Blacks have increased their numbers in academe, the professions and business but by no means have we reached proportional representation. We are told. that imencumbered by racism we can compete and advance, that we can go as far as our talents and ambitions will drive us. Per-haps this is true. Yet while we are being asked to accept this on faith, our blackness is affecting our professional development in blatant and subtle ways.

I asked several people recently if they personally knew a black man or woman in their professions with at least 20 years' experience from whom they could seek competent, honest advice. While we all hungered for such an elder, we knew none. We are forced to blaze a trail that is fraught with uncertainty. Past discriminatory practices have prevented the development of models whom we can emulate. One misstep, -which only hindsight may show as error, can substantially alter or end a career. A word of guidance from a successful colleague would not end the uncertainty of the future but could lessen its impact.

In addition to uncertainty, every day we experience petty suspicion and insensitivity. We are constantly reminded of our heritage, often unkindly.

academic degrees and abilities are second-class and automatically assign us tasks not consistent with our education. A young woman in a Madison Avenue advertising agency told me that professional jobs held by whites were budgeted by department but that blacks were carried in overhead costs, which strongly suggests we are superfluous there. Some people simply assume, no matter what the circumstances, that we are clerical or janitorial helo.

In addition to the tensions of public hours, there are effects upon our private lives. We must participate in office social affairs or be branded hostile or sloof. Yet no one knows what constitutes a "correct" appearance in these situations.

The common feeling among my peers is that while we are attempting to develop a professional identity we do not know how we are being judged, let alone if we are being judged. Nor do we know entirely if our superiors are giving us the exposure and experiences that are the prerequisites for professional advancement.

When we are promoted, is it into a "special market" position reserved for blacks? And did we earn the promotion or is it designed to make the affirmativeaction statistics look good at a year-end review?

Pressures

I am not arguing that blacks should be exempt from the pressures and demands of professional growth and advancement. No one should be given success, but our blackness does make the success more difficult.

We are struggling to develop competence, a recognized profes-sional identity, in an atmosphere of uncertainty and insensitivity. The resulting tension, frustra-tion and anger is reflected in our relationships, the products of our work, and in our private lives. We do not know how fairly we will be treated, how we can use our talents, or if true professional power will be passed into our hands

We American blacks are being sked to wait a generation before we can measure the worth and integrity of our professional lives. No, we do not have it

EEC Summit And Weakness', Of Europeans By Joseph Kraft

PARIS—The meeting of the nine European leaders at the summit here in Paris provides a striking demonstration of weak. ness. The two modern men who were supposed to provide new energy in France and West Gard many have become mired in domestic political difficulties, & the best that can be done now for the European Community is to take a step backward and call it progress.

To be sure, West Germany and France are now led by members of the postwar generation. President Valery Giscard d'Estains and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt are unmarked by the completes of the 1930s or World War II They are technocratic on each nomic issues, and with-it social questions.

d'Estaing's effort to act the modern leader—set apart from Gen. de Gaulle and George Pompidon by a less formal personal life and a more up-to-date attitude—has clearly backfired

French Concern

The President's difficulty arises because this country is now deep ly concerned about inflation and unemployment. The French want a leader who is coping with basic problems—not one who, besides slipping out nights, tends to concentrate his efforts on such relatively marginal issues as 16 form of abortion laws, wiretap ping practices and the playing of the national anthem.

The upshot has been a steady drop in the President's public standing. In the poll taken by the magazine L'Express, for example, his popular approval t down from 54 per cent in Sep. tember to 38 per cent in Novem.

Mr. Schmidt is not in much better shape at home. He is wide ly regarded inside his own Societ Democratic party as a may without a conscience or a philos. ophy-a tough opportunist. Since he replaced Willy Brandt lest spring his party has lost a conple of state elections.

party might not do so well in the coming election in West Genmany's most important state-North Rhine-Westphalia, If that happens he foresees the postbility that his coalition pariners, the Free Democrats, would desert him to form a government with the Christian Democrats. Thus Mr. Schmidt has to nurse the Free Democrats, who are particularly chintzy when it comes to helping Europe.

That penny-pinching attitude has very real impact given pre:ent economic conditions in Europe. West Germany and those countries which have aligned their economies on the deutsche mark are in relatively good shape. But Britain and Italy are basket cases, suffering from inflation, declining economic activity and grave labor troubles. While the French outlook is not clear. this country seems to be tilting much more in the Italian than the West German direction

Cooperation in these conditions would involve big sacrifice by the strong countries, especially West Germans, on behalf of the British and Italians. That might have been possible if the general atmosphere were one of confidence about the future. But the outside environment has been marked by extreme uncertainty on major questions—the price of oil; the value of gold and the dollar; and whether or not Britain would stay in the European Economic Community.

In these conditions, it has proved impossible to realize the goal set by the European summit of 1972-the goal of a Europe bound together in common institutions to the point of having a unified monetary policy. The meeting this week merely acknowledges the failure.

The big decision turns around having regular meetings of the heads of state—an admission that the creation of permanent institutions has been impossible. Arrangements are also being made to help the very poorest regions of the poorest countries—a step which may make it easier for Prime Minister Harold Wilson to keep Britain in Europe. Finally there is under way an effort to hammer out a policy on energy which would smooth the way to a meeting of minds between President Ford and Mr. Giscard d'Estaing when they talk in Martinique over the weekend.

President Giscard d'Estains calls all this the "Europe of necessity." Perhaps. But no one should forget that, set against the high hopes asserted when the new leaders came to power, the progress has been meager indeed.

Coral Castles, a Marine Museum

By Naomi Barry

ELATH, Israel (IHT).—Raffy Neison's Beach is Mecca to the fanatics of mask and snorkel. Pilgrimages to Raffy's ideal jumping-off place are year-round. since water temperatures vary only about six degrees between summer and winter.

The bearded Nelson plays lu local character part costumed it desert boots fraved denim short: and a U.S. cavalry hat circe th General Custer period, Severa years ago he staked out his sand corral five miles down the coas. from the frontier town of Elath along a wind-protected cove.

Within the split rail enclosure he offers a few color, il amenitic.
—some rarely used Club Mediterranėe style huts and a shish kebab-ecue tended by a Bedouic lady veiled to her kohl-rimmed eyes. The real lure, however, is the deep and narrow gulf which according to many ichthyologis: contains the richest intensity of marine life in the world.

For non-swimmers the glassbottomed excursion boat opens a window on a Camelot of coral castles below the surface of the cea. But euphoria is to bodily glide through the warm waters which are a matural habitat to 1.000 species of vertebrates and invertebrates.

The Maritime Museum

An almost daily skin diver from this brach is David Frid-man, director of the Elath Maritime Museum. The initial dip changed the course of his life. In 1956, David, a native of Argentina spent a student vacation on an Israeli kibbutz. Before returning home, he visited Elath for a day with an Argentiniar friend. "My first impression of the reet and fish? Not possible, I think I am dreaming. We had only one mask. We fight all day, which one should have it. Six years later, I returned to Israel, straight to Elath. I wanted to live in no other place. "I was a chartered accountant but I hated my business so much I said I have no profession. That way I became a truck driver with a big salary. All my free time, I am in the water. Thousands and thousands of hours. Slowly, slowly I learn. The sea became my university."

Today probably nobody knows more intimately the undersea world of the Gulf than Fridman. For the scientists of the nearby Marine Station of the Hebrew University, he brings specimens they are sure exist but have never seen. A variety previously unsuspected has been officially named Pseudochromis Fridmani.

In 1965 he convinced the municipality to let him develop a maritime museum in an old wooden house promising he would make it a small tourist attraction. "So I abandoned my duty as a big salaried driver for one third the money. I am happy. For me it is a dream; my best present from God."

Last year Fridman's museum

lrew 80,000 visitors. "This sea is a phenomenon," he said. "It is only six to 25 kms. wide and it is 2,000 meters deep. The distance from Elath to the Firan Straits is only 180 kms. Inere are no strong storms to destroy the reels which make them an ideal area for reproduction. About 800 kinds of fish are protected by that coral." The examples of coral Fridman has brought up from the deep are a fantasy of shapes: organ pipes, tolephone wires, petrified forests, crenelated towers. In the archaeclogical corner, the amphorae and anchors he discovered locally are nare. They are so encrusted with toral that in the water few divers iscerned them.

The Whale Shark "Our biggest fish," he said, "is the whale shark. Ten to 12 meters but it is not dangerous. The sand shark lives on the bottom and finds its nourishment from creatures in the sand."

The big specimens are awesome but the ones that appeal to the amateurs are the little fellows of b-illiant hue-crimson, fuchsia,

A Letter From Mrs. Sadat

TEL AVIV, Dec. 9 (AP).-The wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has written to an Israeli housewife that "we women and we mothers have to fight for reace and friendship . . . War should be cancelled out of all dictionaries of mankind." latter was sent to Ruth Liss of Halfa whose paratrosper son was killed in the 1967 Mideast war. Mrs. Liss had written to Mrs. Sadat "because I believe that the women of the world have to fight for peace."

"The luminous fish who come out of their dark caverns only by tight are very common here alplaces elsewhere," said Fridman, He paused before a case with several varieties of seahorses. They have a very liberated form of reproduction. The female brings the eggs to the male to be fecundated. The male then carries the eggs for 45 days before he drops them."

He pointed to a very small blue striped fish. "That is the valet of the Gulf. He removes parasites. Other fish wait in line for their turn to be cleaned by him. He is so important in the scheme that none of the other fish will eat

By spring, the pioneer museum will be transferred to a scientifically modern institution nearing completion several kilometers further down the coast. On the basis of a recent research trip to aquariums around the world. Frieman claims the new museum will be different from others.

"There will be exhibits only from this sea. The water piped in will be from this sea. specimens will eat the plankton of their natural habitat."

To see the habitat at its most natural, a visitor will need but to walk a short bridge to a tower constructed in the water. By descending the stairs to underwater wind wed chambers, a landlubber can lock out on a wealth of exotic marine life swimming in the rea arcund him.

Raffy Nelson's Beach, about 5 miles down the Sharm-et Sheikh road from the town of Elath. The Maritime Museum is in 'h3 town of Elath, and will be moring in early 1975 a few miles jurther down the coast from Raffy Nelson's Beach.

Arab Official Defends Oil Policy

SINGAPORE, Dec. 9 (AP-DJ) .- The Arabs do ot want to see the European economy in ruins, ecause their economy depends on those of the Vest, Hussain Najadi, chairman and managing jirector of Arab Investments for Asia Ltd., said

He told delegates attending the Pacific Basin nergy conference that petrodollars will finally nd up in Western banks and treasuries. The Vest will probably finance and refinance its overnments, industries, exports and the developng countries with its own type of sid program, Najadi added.

He also rebutted allegations that the Arabs eere wealthler than the industrialized nations. audi Arabia, Kuwait, Iraq, the United Arab mitates, Qatar, Bahrain, Libya and Algeria will lave a combined oil revenue of about $60 billion 1974. But last year, General Motors, Exxon Ford Motor, Chrysler and General Electric had issets of $72 billion, Mr. Najadi said.

The revenue of these corporations last year vas 10 times greater than oil revenue of the intire Organization of Arab Petroleum Exportng Countries, he said. "Our financial reserves are subject to the diminishing value of the pound and U.S. dollar by way of hyper-inflation and frequent devalua-tions." Mr. Najadi said. It is wrong to call the Arabs' present liquid position a surplus, because they are fast depleting their assets, he said.

A few months after receiving increased revenue the Arabs are expected to embark on a worldwide investments and recycling plan dictated by he West, Mr. Najadi said.

He noted that many banks, though Arabic in name, were managed by Europeans and Americans who made vital decisions on investments and management of funds. He said the Arabs could not be expected to have acquired the expertise that had been gained by the Europeans over the centuries.

He added that Western countries will corner the Middle Eastern markets with their products and technology. They are selling capital goods, military hardware and their services at inflated prices, Mr. Najadi said.

Gradually, Southeast Asia Pacific Basin nations will get a share of the oil funds by way of the advanced nations with loans tied to machinery, technology and services of the developed countries, Mr. Najadi said.

business with the equivalent of over $8 billion in extra income. Even more startling, the central bank—Germany's "second govern-ment" and powerful defender of the mark—has promised to sup-port Mr. Schmidt's measures with a cautious easing of credit. The Bundesbank plans to increase the money supply by 8 per cent, enough to finance Bonn's program if trade unions hold down their wage demands. For domestic critics and the unions, Mr. Schmidt's program is overdue and is not strong enough. Thanks to the Bundes bank's harsh credit crubs, total output has barely grown at all this year and is now heading downward. Unemployment last month reached 800,000, the highest in 15 years. It is all but certain to top one million this winter, or about 4.5 per cent of the labor force.

Low Inflation Rate But thanks also to the conservative policies followed here. Germany alone among rich nations has braked the pace of in-fiation. Consumer prices rose about 7 per cent in 1973 and again in 1974

This is a terrifying level for Germans, who saw their currency wiped out 50 years ago, setting the stage for the Nazis. But the central point is that the rate of inflation has not increased and is now beginning to come down

Mr. Schmidt's deliberate decision to expand the economy will be heartily welcomed by Germany's trading partners in Europe. The nation's aggressive makers of machines, tools and instruments, confronted with growthless markets at home, have been turning their remarkable energies to sales abroad. Their success has increased the trading deficits of France, Britain, Italy and others already wrestling with foreign debts swollen by the big jump in oil prices. A bigger German domestic demand should suck in more imports and turn manufacturers' attention to home markets. Incomes Raised

The core of the government's program increases consumer in-comes. They will receive an extra $4 billion in family allowances and another $1.6 billion in tax cuts, mostly in the lower income brackets.

In addition, Mr. Schmidt is due to announce a program of about $800 million in public works for depressed regions and a tax credit for business investment in plant and machinery. That credit could brighten corporate balance sheets by another $2 billion or more. In all, authorities calculate that the budget deficit of federal, state and local governments will reach a record $20 billion next year-

Boussac Names Chief Rival To Direct His Textile Empire

PARIS, Dec. 9 (AP).—French textile millionaire Marcel Boussac, founder of the Christian Dior fashion house and one of the country's richest men, placed his textile empire under the control of his most dynamic rival today under an agreement sponsored by Industry Minister Michel d'Or-

Mr. Boussac, 85, controls companies employing a total of more than 15,000 persons with a com-bined annual turnover estimated at $160 million. Under his autocratic control, his empire showed signs of cracking in recent years and Mr. d'Ornano intervened to prevent a possible foreign takeover or massive unemployment through a collapse of the group.

Ford Motor Government Is Urged To Act on Recession

Cut Back by

DEARBORN, Mich., Dec. 9 (AP-DJ).—Ford Motor Co. plans 1975 capital spending of about $800 million, down from over $900 million this year, Henry Ford 2d, chairman, said in a yearend statement today.

Mr. Ford said the company had originally planned to spend over $1 billion in 1974 but "because of the sharp decline in our profits, continuing cost increases, and the uncertain sales outlook," 1974 capital spending was cut by more than $100 million.

Mr. Ford said: "If there is no decisive change in government policy, car sales in the United States could remain at the fourthquarter rate of about 7.3 million or drift even lower." He said, however, that if con-sumer confidence is restored and economic growth resumes by the middle of next year, car sales could be as high as 9.5 million. Mr. Ford said that he sees no indication of economic upturn in

He called on the government to introduce decisive steps to stim-ulate the economy and a tough federal energy policy. He said the administration should "come up with new substantive proposals now" and Congress should act on such proposals now.

Stresses Recession "The time has come for the government to recognize that recession has replaced inflation as the greatest and most immediate domestic problem," he

He added: "There is no reason to believe that we will have an economic upturn in 1975." 'Consumers have stopped buying because they are airaid that things will go from had to much worse," he said. "Washington must take steps that will persuade the people that the nation still has control of its fate and is not drifting helplessly into deeper and deeper trouble."

Transition to an era of expensive energy "is going to in-volve fundamental changes in our economy and our way of life -changes that we have only dimly begun to recognize and have not yet really begun to plan for,"

"We need a tough and realistic national energy policy now," he said. "We need a new look at the trade-offs between environmental improvement and economic viability, and we need it now."

GM Price Cut Meanwhile, in Detroit, General Motors Corp. said it will reduce the base price of each of its 1975 cars sold in the United States by $13 as it replaces the previously mandated ignition interlock with the safety belt reminder

The new system will meet recently revised requirements of the National Highway Traffic Safety

GM said the amount of the reduction is based on the current costs of equipment being removed or added. The company said the lower prices will be ef-fective on all cars assembled be-

The discount rate is the fee the Fed charges member com-mercial banks for borrowings from the reserve system.

The board said it acted "in view of the recent slackening in the demand for credit and in recognition of the lower level of market interest rates that has developed since last summer."

The surprise announcement was made a few hours after the government reported a sharp jump in the U.S. unemployment rate for November, to 6.5 per cent of the work force from 6 per cent in October. It is understood that the Fed's move reflects the board's concern about the recent sharp deterioration in economic conditions. The action represents another slight easing of Fed policy as

U.S. to Step Up Anti-Trust Studies

By Michael C. Jensen NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (NYT). Attorney General William Saxbe has disclosed that 10 major industries are being studied by the Justice Department's anti-trust division for evidence of pricefixing and monopoly behavior. Some of the inquiries, he said, would probably lead to full antitrust investigations. The industries named were automobiles, steel, primary metals, tobacco, coal, chemicals, beef, earth-moving equipment, news-print and other paper products, and heavy electrical equipment. Mr. Saxbe's disclosure was made in a speech prepared for delivery to the National Association of Manufacturers at the close of the group's two-day annual meeting, Friday. A major theme of the conference was the need to lobby for better treat-ment from the government.

Scapegoats Claim

Some businessmen have complained privately that they are being made scapegoats by an administration that is attempting to overcome a pro-business reputation. They cite the recent anti-trust action against American Telephone & Telegrar': Co. Others point out, however, that another major suit, against International Business Machines Corp., was filed under the beef, eggs, tuna and other basic cost-of-living items.

Mr.: Saxbe's recent habit of delivering broadside announcements of studies and investigations has led to a wait-and-see attitude among some observers.

He emphasized that the "economic reviews" were not anti-trust investigations but rather studies by economists of the Justice Department's anti-trust to accumulate "information and insight" into the functioning of various industries. He added, however, that the Justice Department was "going into this business in deadly seriousness."

"Some of the studies, I am sure, will show no behavior that violates the anti-trust laws," he stressed. "But I will also tell you bluntly that I expect that some of the studies will lead to anti-trust investigations."

Mr. Saxbe also said the Justice Department would look into professional fields where there was state regulation or selfregulation. He cited doctors, dentists, pharmacists, accountants, engineers, funeral directors and veterinarians.

A greater emphasis will also be placed on criminal actions in anti-trust enforcement, Mr. Saxbe said. He called for more stringent sentencing in such cases.

$2-Billion Overcharge by Oil Firms Seen

Robert Montgomery, general counsel of the energy agency, called Sen. Ribicoff's characterization of the GAO audit "not balanced." He said the FEA is stepping up its policing of big oil refineries' prices and already has agreed to give the GAO all the information it wants. Sen. Ribicoff "presented only the critical side of the (GAO) report," he told reporters summoned to a hasty news conference after the senator's charge was they could charge. Mr. Montgomery estimated that about $40 million of that bad been passed through to customers. but that the remaining $290 million in "potential pass-throughs had been blocked by new FEA regulations. The GAO report said, "We were unable to determine the extent of the violations because the FEA declined to furnish us pertinent information or refused to discuss the cases with us on the basis that such disclosure or discussion might compromise its position in potential cases." Mr. Montgomery acknowledged that FEA auditors had withheld some information initially from the GAO. The agency felt, he said, that some data procured from oil companies' books should not be turned over to the congressional investigators until they had been fully examined by FEA officials. The FEA never intended to withhold the information per-manently, Mr. Montgomery said, and FEA administrator John Sawhill has now agreed that the GAO can have whatever data it wants at any time.

150 U.S. Banks Being Watched by Currency Office

NEW YORK Dec. 9 (AP-DJ),

—A U.S. Treasury Department
official said today the number of banks on a special supervisory list at the controller of the currency office totals about 150, the highest in the last 12 years. The official, Justin Watson, first deputy controller of the currency, said the current total is up from about 100 banks on the list a year ago.

In an interview after a speech to Institutional Investor magazine's banking conference here, he said: "This doesn't mean that they are on the brink of failure. It means that we aren't happy with the way they are operating."
Mr. Watson told the conference, "We put banks on this warning list when they get the sniffles and we think they are getting a cold. And we keep them on that list until they have been released from the hospital." The list, he said, means the banks are "subject to more than normal supervision." Nevertheless, he said, the banking system today 'is much stronger than the press had indi-

Getting natural gas to where it's needed most was the whole idea that started our company.

We built the pipeline that first brought natural gas from the fields of Texas to America's industrial Northeast.
We're also taking steps to help insure that the future supply will meet the continuing demand.

This effort takes our drills far from shore in the Gulf of Mexico and over a thousand miles north of the Arctic Circle.

We're developing new gas fields and preparing plans for pipelines under the frozen Arctic Ocean.

We are seeking worldwide sources of natural gas with plans to import it in liquid form in huge LNG

We are also working on the gasification of coal and naphtha. It all adds up to a multi-front effort to supply clean burning natural gas to the consumer. This is only one of the many areas

This is only one of the many areas in which Tenneco has been building. In others: we are exploring for and developing new sources of oil in the Dutch North Sea, the British North Sea, the Red Sea, the South China Sea and in other promising areas of the world. We are expanding our Newport

News Shipyard, already the world's most sophisticated.

We are providing components for auto emission control systems.

We are also building better construction and farm equipment. Marketing fresher premium quality fruits and vegetables. Developing whole new residential and recreational communities.

Finding new ways to package goods. And adding new specialty chemicals to our comprehensive line.

Because when it comes to the future we plan to be ready.

As a whole Western Europe is a place with limitless business possibilities.

But it's also a number of very different countries which tend to complicate things a bit.

Imagine having to deal separately with an Austrian bank, a Belgian bank, a Dutch bank, a French bank, a German bank and an Italian bank to name but a few possibilities.

That won't be easy. But it won't be necessary if your business is with Midland Bank, a great British bank. We can take care of the financial side of

We have correspondent relationships with over 1,000 banks in Western Europe

We're participants in a European banking group which will give you access to full service banking facilities at almost 9,000 branches.

And in Britain, with over 3,200 branches we're as powerful a bank group as you

All of which makes a strong case for getting something started here even if it's only a financial headquarters.

send you a 32 page brochure that in general terms tells you all you need to know about setting up in Britain.

To get your copy write to: Mr. F. O. Dumphy, Midland Bank, Room 50, 60 Gracechurch St., London EC3P 3BN. England.

If you bank with the Midland, you're in business in Europe.

INTERNAȚIONAL EXECUTIVE OPPORTUNITIES

We (Help) Change Lives

Normally, when an executive or professional changes jobs, he merely increases his income a bit and moves up a notch in the corporate maze. We often question whether this kind of job change means too much. Often a lot more ground can be covered a lot faster if a man makes a basic change in his corporate atmosphere or finds FREDERICK a totally new challenge or shifts his field or industry. Usually this sort of change adds up to being a major step upward in responsibility and income. In short, a whole new fife.

If you feel you may be ready for an important change in your life, phone or write for a (confi-dential) cost-free interview with a professional Career Advisor. We (help) change lives World's Largest Consultants in Executive Assessment,

THE SHADOW KNOWS

By Diane Johnson. Knopf. 277 pp. 36.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

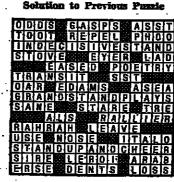

WHEN I finished reading "The Shadow Knows," I felt as if I had fallen in love with Diane Johnson's heroine. She reminds me of John Donne's lines on his mistress's undressing for bed: "O my America!" he ex-claims, "My new found land!" Though she is 29 divorced and the mother of four, Mrs. N. Hexam is a new-found woman. Brave as an astronaut, she ventures alone into spaces no one ever entered before. Trying to follow her, we begin to under-stand that, in dramatizing only one sex for some two or three thousand years, we have discovered only half of the human con-

Vive la différence used to have primarily an anatomical reference, and only now are we realizing that women are so different, in every way, from men that you cannot even talk about them in the same terms. For the time being, it is not a question of sociology, but ontology: a woman should not mean, but be. Or as the French say: "Ça se sent, ça ne s'explique pas." "How should you walk in that space," Wallace Stevens asked.

And know nothing of the madness of space/Nothing of its jocular procreations?" This is N. Hexam's neighborhood, her home grounds. She knows all about the madness of a woman's space, inner or outer, and about its jocular procreations. She is so astonished to learn what she herself is capable of that she accepts without protest the "jocular procreations" of any and everyone she meets.

Her black maid is mad: What else is there for a black maid to be? She herself and her husband are "antagoformer fundamental opposites. They have discovered their es-sential irreconcilability simply by setting up the expectations that marriage implies. Convention clarifies our hatreds. Humanity is too voluptuous to be legalized, too berserk to be bound. But Mrs. Hexam is not disheartened: "Complete despair," she says. "is rather restful." It gives her a respite from the passion that shakes her like a dog shaking a rat in its teeth. Love "Is not an action like a play," but "a confident state of mind, a clear and reliable feeling. Sex is its nuclear testing ground, so to speak, a yoga exercise that can harness the cosmos or break your back. Though she pursues it whenever and wherever she can. Mrs. Hexam is aware that this "flame" may "just burn me out inside like a dugout caroe."

The rise and fall of her ideas is as natural and poignant as the beating of a human heart, which always seems to me too primitive a device to support all our sophistication. She is a missionary in search of her mission. Her battered suitcase is stuffed with bleak lyricism and rueful optimism. When we first meet her she is afraid of being murdered. Because she is so irresistibly human, she seems an inevitable object for murder. Only people, after all, can be murdered.

Vandalism, threatening calls, an attack on her mai hate us so much? We are

Is it because she is divorce because she has upset the h ance of order? "Do you ma deserve it?" she asks. Is husband crazy or passing enough to kill her? He did. in the lap of her 340-pound me and he sleepwalked into daughter's crib: Does this qual him? Was their marriage ordinary, too everyday, to insumurder? When he left she is the inquiring children, "Data is moving his books," and i oldest daughter said, "Now can get his pillow."

N. Hexam has a lover who married. They have discorn "each in the other what a has to give," but he is too eventional to leave his wife daughter, so tight, even in ta ing about them, that these a noun . . . are spoken in adve only." When his wife learns the affair, she sees it not as t desperate act of an "anguish man," but "the vagaries of certain age." And she torms him by trying harder, by bei such a good sport that the choice left to him would be foul out. The silence betwa them is tense with a terri "gripping and pulling," but prefers it to her talk. The particular, as opposed to gener. problem is that he has gre away from her—but then it few of us grow toward other.

Mrs. Johnson has an alms sensual appreciation of inco gruity. When Mrs. Hexam's be band announces that he is got to have a vasectomy, she as "I know. They do it to you underdeveloped nations in it train depot." When her in maid leaves and her success dies under peculiar circumstant she calls the police, and the tective who arrives suggests to they list the death as "cut unknown." To publicize too mat murders, he theorizes, is demaalizing to the community. even encourages them to perpetuate a certain view of life. that encompasses such occu: rences. N. as the thereine : lyzed" friend of hers as someone who sees human relationships as a kind of race to reproach your friends with the hostle thoughts they engender in you before they can tell you theirs' Somewhere Mrs. Johnson ha picked up, with an infallible en-the blues beat of Southern blad speech, or at least the riff cross and stomp of those who "car get it together." She hears and trombones and talking trumps the sibilance of brush on cymb and the rumble of the bass. Yo can tell from their very name that she knows these people Osella, Lutherine, Clyde and b brother Beyerly, A. J. B. Raider. When she reaches ittheir depths, she brings up, n radical chic, or any other kin but hominy grits and a hung-for the feeling of home. In # final integration, she imperblacks are no better or war than we are-but they are & ferent. Competitive Balance

For many years, the reserve system has been regarded here as immoral, illegal and unnecessary. Promoters in all professional team sports argue that it is necessary to preserve competi-tive balance and thus protect the box office. They say that, if better jobs when their contracts expired, the richest clubs would corner all the stars and make rivals look as foolish as the foot-

Apart from the fact the it takes years to reach the level that the Giants had attained, there are sound reasons why this wouldn't happen. And if it did threaten to happen, it could be averted easily.

Today all teams in a league share equally in revenue from network television. This division is made out of self-interest, and not, as the football people pretend, out of generosity to poor little Green Bay, whose Packers couldn't hope to sell TV rights for the price New York or Chicago would get. Well, if the clubs shared equally in all other income, too, including gate receipts and revenue from parking, food and other concessions, then all clubs would be equally rich or poor and none could corner the player market, with or without a reserve system. Suggest this to any owner and the reply would be swift: "No way. It would never work." Ask him to tell about the time it was tried and didn't work.

MAPERLEY ROOT: MARIEM MAVERLEY ROOT: MARIEM
The Beefalo, the Cattalo and a Folk Character

NEW YORK, Nov. 10 (NYT) .-In the search to find a red meat that is lower in animal fat than beef and that comes from an antmal that does not feed on scarce grain supplies, an answer may be found in a hybrid buftalo-cow called a bestalo. IHT, Nov. 11, 1974.

PARIS (IHT).—The last time this was tried—about a hundred years ago-the resulting animal was called a cattalo. As a worker with words I am not enthusiastic about either name (they sound like trademarks), but on the whole I think I prefer cattalo. It implies that the animal is entitled to a little life on the range before it ends up in cold storage. The cattalo was a cross of Polled Angus and buffalo which was achieved by Charles Goodnight, one of America's minor folk heroes.

It is perhaps not really necessary to have expended great effort and much money to produce a new meat animal at a time when we are being urged to help solve world food shortages by eating less meat and more vegetable foods; for land that can give us 3 million calories in the form of wheat will produce only 1 million in the form of meat. Besides there is a simpler way of producing less fatty red meat than by crossing cattle and buffalo: just raise the buffaloes. This is already being done in the Pacific Northwest, but on a small scale, so buffalo meat is still rare and a luxury. Raising buffalo in the present circumstances would have the advantage that three buffaloes can be brought to maturity on land that would support only two steers. Buffalo meat does indeed contain a lesser proportion of fat than beef, and it is not marbled through the meat as it is in beef, but forms an outer layer which can be easily cut away.

Charles Goodnight raised buffaloes, too, but this is not why he is best remembered when he is remembered at all: It is for inventing the chuck wagon, which he didn't do. Nobody invented the chuck wagon: It evolved.

At the beginning of the epic period of the great cattle drives from Texas northward, when the only way to get fresh meat to market was on the hoof, cowboys carried their provisions in saddlebags—usually bread, bacon, salt and coffee. Beef was easily available en route: today's straggler was tomorrow's pot roast. When an animal was slaughtered on the trail, it was the duty of the cook (usually a Negro, a Mexican, or, for some obscure reason, a German) to see to it that nothing edible was wasted. This economical attitude accounted for the legendary dish known as son-of-a-bitch stew, which utilized as many as possible of the often despised internal organs of the beast, but especially the marrow gut. This is a tube connecting two of a beef animal's four stomachs, which in young calves contains what looks like marrow but is actually a digestive for milk. It has a distinctive flavor, which is the soul of son-of-abitch stew.

Bony Fish

Any native of Marseilles will tell you that bouillabaisse is not bouillabaisse unless it includes the revoltingly bony fish called rascasse, and any cowboy will tell you that son-of-a-bitch stew is not son-of-a-bitch stew unless it includes the marrow gut. The Marseillais would add that you can vary the other seafish in bouillabaisse at will, but you must season it with saffron, and the cowboy that you can make your son-of-a-bitch stew with any other parts of a beef critter which you have handy, but you should flavor it with skunk eggs—cowboy for onions.

At the time when cowboys were still carrying their own food on horseback, a wagon did accompany the cattle drives, but it was used to carry the personal gear of the animal drivers and the trail boss; it was usually hauled by oxen. Then it occurred to the cooks to make more prairie strawberries (red Mexican beans) at their overnight stops than they needed for dinner, and pack the rest of them into the gear wagon for the midday meal next day, which was often summary. This started the idea of developing a special wagon for food alone, and the chuck wagon was born.

Horses replaced oxen as its motive power, for the cook had to speed past the slowly moving steers and set up ahead of them at the next planned stopping place before the drive caught up with produced an heir.

him. The chuck wagon grew ever more practical as experience added new improvements to it, until it became a model of efficiency. Its tailgates opened downward to form a broad table on which the cook could work. It was autonomous for water and fuel, carrying its own in case they should be found in short supply at the stop. Room was provided for the shipshape stowing away of pots, pans, kettles and a Dutch oven in which to bake sourdough biscuits. large chest carried the food in compartments ingeniously devised for maximum convenience. This was the chuck box, and to this Goodnight did contribute improvements. He had other inventions to his credit too, mostly in the harness category, such as improved stirrups and a safe sidesaddle.

Organizing Drives

It was not his inventions which made Charles Goodnight famous among cattlemen in his time, but his skill in organizing cattle drives one of which may have been the largest single operation in the whole history of the Far West—the 1868 trek of 3,000 cattle 800 miles from Texas to Wyoming, to feed the workers who were building the Union Pacific Railroad and the soldiers who were protecting the workers from the Indians.

Wyoming was a new destination for cattle and there were no established trails leading in that direction, as there were to Abilene, Kansas and Kansas City, with known stopping points where water and pasturage could be found for the twice-daily two-hour grazing pause of the herds (even with these feeding periods, a 3,000-head drive could walk off 450,000 pounds of beef on the trail). Goodnight had to survey a new route later named the Goodnight-Loving trail (he had a partner named Oliver Loving). It crossed Indian territory, but that was a minor problem; Indians as a rule did not mind whites crossing their reservations as long as they kept going and left again, and ordinarily did not even raid the cattle unless they were unusually hungry; the Cheyenne, always good businessmen, collected a reasonable grazing charge if their territory was crossed.

White men could be worse; in an early version of the racket, outlaws sometimes demanded protection money to let the drives through, and if they didn't get it, stampeded the cattle at night. Cattle might stampede anyway, seized with sudden panic in the dark for no discernible reason. The cowboys invented a protective tactic against this. Before a drive started, they conditioned the animals to a familiar night sound, the singing of wranglers riding around them as they slept. On the trail the drivers continued to patrol around the sleeping animals at night, still serenading. If they were awakened in strange territory, perhaps by unaccustomed noises, they would hear their reassuring lullaby and go to sleep again, At first the singing was composed of nonsense syllables (yippi yippi yay, yippi yay), but these were gradually replaced by words which made sense (get along, little dogie, get along); cowboy music was born on the trails.

Goodnight knew all about driving cattle: how many men to send ahead (the pointers) to lead the way; how many to post behind to prod forward the slower cattle (the drags); how many to station on the sides (the wing) riding continuously back and forward along the flanks of the drive to keep the flow of cattle, perhaps a mile long, moving in a pack of uniform width. He had to drive men Cowboys are not docile characters. His contracts with them included a clause that if one of them took it into his head to shoot another, he would be judged by his peers and hanged on the spot, unless, one supposes, he could prove self-defense or intolerable provocation. Clater Goodnight would form one of the first Texas vigilante groups to put down cattle rustling).

The trail was a tough life, but after Goodnight had settled down to a comparatively calm existence in 1877, building up with John George Adair, an Irish cattleman, a million-acre ranch feeding 100,000 steers, he told an interviewer: "All in all my years on the trail were the happiest I have lived. There were many hardships and dangers, of course, that called on all a man had of endurance and bravery; but when all went well there was no other life so

Charles Goodnight was an outsized character, of the kind the old West engendered as effortlessly as a hen lays eggs. He married at the age of 91, and before he died two years later, in 1929, he had որությունը գորականի Արարդանի անականի ա

PEOPLE: Ford's Ski Instructor - 'Fairly Nervous'

Gerald Ford is not the world's worst skier but he gives his instructor the jitters when he takes a spill. "When Jerry is up there skiing, he falls on his rear like the rest of us do." Dennis Hoeger told Kenneth Walsh of the Associated Press. Hoeger, 28, will be Ford's private instructor when the President takes his Christmas vacation in Vail. Colo. He first met Ford in 1969 when giving lessons to two of Ford's children Susan and Steven Ford himself began taking lessons in 1972 "Im always concerned when people fall down," Hoeger said "but, I don't lose any sleep over it." However, now that Ford is President, Hoeger says he is "fairly nervous about him. But if it's going to happen, then it's going to happen." Hoeger described Ford, 61; as a "good recreational skier ... We obviously don't challenge the toughest runs. He's in tremendous condition for a man of his age. It's
